Educational consultant Frankenstein believes that the right book in the right hands at the right time is only the first step on the journey to developing confident readers. Readers who can discuss the books they've read will go even further. Here, she presents an excellent system for achieving that goal. The bulk of the book is made up of 100-plus "Story Pages," which include both "Read Together" and "Read Alone" age ranges, story synopses, thematic keywords, sample discussion questions, and read-alikes. Teachers and librarians will go wild for this one. Be sure to have copies both for circulation and for reference. (Index not seen.)
